Miss Helen Thompson gave a luncheon today for Miss Susan Gay of Kansas City.

A party of girls who have been attending cooking school wanted to show their men friends how much they had learned and planned a party at the Country Club for last night. The feature of which was to be a dinner cooked by the girls. But at the last minute the girls got cold feet and engaged a cook to prepare the meat and vegetables, so the only things served which they cooked were the biscuits made by a visiting girl, who has never gone to cooking school and who got her culinary experience in the good old fashioned way practicing on her helpless father, and the dessert which two of the other girls volunteered to prepare. They discussed different elaborate and intricate concoctions but finally compromised on toasted marshmallows and whipped cream. While the marshmallows were cooking they puffed away and looked so good that the girls were delighted with their success and couldn't wait until they served them but had to run right in and tell everybody how perfectly Grand they were going to be and how high they had puffed with what a beautiful brown they were. They bragged about their marshmallows so much that they forgot to watch them and left them in too long, with the result that they came to the table they had fallen to less than their original proportions and were little, thin, shrunken looking things—and there were only three.

But, pooh! who cared? If you were told who the two girls were you would agree that anybody as pretty as they doesn't need to know how to cook. A man would eat an old shoe with a lumpy salad dressing over it if girls like those would let him before him, and think it was ambrosia and nectar.

Miss Eleanor Wheeler will entertain the Last Year's Buds and a corresponding number of men at bridge this evening, in compliance to Miss Floyd Robinson of Sterling.

"I'll tell you what," a visiting girl says frankly, "I don't care for hen parties. I say, no music, no party, for mine."

A party of perfect ladies out making polite visits stopped at the home of a woman who had a little 10-year-old boy. The house mother let them in and went to announce them to her mistress. A few minutes later as they sat waiting in right, stony, silence they heard the voice of the little boy, "Company or no company, you ain't a-goin' to wash my face with spit."
